The Jones Clinic welcomes Melissa Curtiss as new nurse practitioner

Germantown, TN—The Jones Clinic, a leader in oncology and hematology care in the Mid South, welcomes Melissa Curtiss as a nurse practitioner. Curtiss is a certified family nurse practitioner, an advanced practice registered nurse in Tennessee and Mississippi and a registered nurse.

”Melissa is a vital addition to our team,” says Michael Jones, M.D., F.A.C.P. “Her experience and ease with patients make her an asset to our clinic.”

Curtiss receiving her Bachelor of Science Degree in Nursing at the Baptist College of Health Sciences , and she began her career in oncology as a nurse on the Myelosuppression Unit at Baptist Memorial Hospital Memphis, treating leukemia and lymphoma patients. While at Baptist, Curtiss received the award for one of Baptist’s best nurses.

She is a member of the Tennessee Nursing Society, Sigma Theta Tau, International Nursing Society, Nursing Honor Society and American Academy of Nurse Practitioners.

In addition to rounding at the hospital and seeing patients at the office, Curtiss is in charge of Quality Assurance Program at The Jones Clinic administered through the American Society of Clinical Oncology.

About the Jones Clinic

The Jones Clinic, an oncology and hematology clinic with locations in Germantown, TN, and New Albany, MS, was founded by C. Michael Jones, M.D., F.A.C.P., an Anderson Associate with MD Anderson Cancer Center. The clinic is one of 16 in the nation to receive the Quality Oncology Practice Initiative (QOPI) certification, and patients benefit from more than 35 clinical trials through the clinic’s partnership with Vanderbilt-Ingram Cancer Center and the Cancer Trials Support Unit. The dedicated staff at The Jones Clinic offers patients the most cutting-edge research and treatments, while focusing on one-on-one personal care. www.thejonesclinic.com.
